

CAUSE OF FLU FOUND: ISOLATE THE GERM

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., February 2.—(By the Associated Press)—Hopes of thousands of sufferers from the epidemic of influenza for a cure or preventive of the disease were raised today by the announcement of the discovery of the cause and the isolation of the germ.

The announcement is made by Dr. Simon W. Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, who attributes the discovery to Dr. Peter K. Oltzky and Dr. Frederick T. Gattis, also of the institute. The isolation will permit experimentation with antitoxins and antiseptics. So small is the germ that it must be magnified 1,000 times before it is seen distinctly under the microscope. The germ lodges in the nose and throat during the first 36 hours of influenza infection then attacks the lungs in such a way as to make them susceptible to other germs in the nose and throat, notably those of pneumonia and bronchitis. In describing the details of the discovery Dr. Flexner says:

Two General Effects
"The effects are of two general classes—first as they affect the blood and alter the relative number of red and white blood cells through the destruction of one variety of the latter. The second kind of effect from the germ causing influenza is far more significant and consists of solid injuries to the substance of the lungs, recognizable under the microscope.

"This new bacterium found thus far only in cases of epidemic influenza in the early hours of the disease, is so small that it can pass through the pores of an earthenware filter and when magnified one thousand times is just capable of being seen distinctly under the microscope. It has been given the name of bacterium pneumonitiformes, which translated into simple English signifies that this germ injures the lung tissue in such a way as to deprive it of the power of ordinarily possessing it, of resisting the attacks of the common bacteria of the nose and throat.

"In healthy these common bacteria are easily destroyed by the lung tissue, but as a result of the injuries induced by bacterium pneumonitiformes, they are enabled to lodge and multiply in the lungs."

Dr. Flexner, the bacterium expert, says it never has been found in healthy persons, nor in those sick with other diseases. When it is injected into the windpipe of rabbits, it produces effects similar to those seen in human beings in the various stages of the disease.

Should Heed Warnings
Attention should be directed to the warnings in order that due precautions may be taken to limit as far as possible the spread of this disease from person to person and more particularly to avoid by means of proper medical and nursing measures the development of throat and lung infections which are so apt to follow influenza.

The series of epidemic waves of influenza have served to extend medical knowledge of the disease. Dr. Flexner says, particularly in respect to the bacteriology of the original disease. He used the term original to distinguish between the influenza as such and the common complication of bronchitis and pneumonia, to which the grave nature of influenza is directly due.

The announcement continues:

"The newer principles for cultivating disease germs outside the bodies of man and animals, in their nature very difficult to grow in this manner, but necessary for purposes of study and research were worked out ten years ago or more by Dr. Hideo Noguchi, of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research in New York City. It was by the use of these new methods modified to meet the needs of the special conditions necessary in studying influenza that additional knowledge of great importance was obtained."

SEVERE EARTH SHOCK FELT

WASHINGTON, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—A tremendous earthquake was recorded today on seismographs throughout the United States. Its location was uncertain. Father Tondorf, observer at the famous Georgetown University Observatory, thought it might be in Argentina, but observers at other places suggested Alaska, the Philippines and Japan or China as the probable center of the disturbance.

Indications were that the center of the disturbance probably was between 4,000 and 5,000 miles from Washington, about the same distance as the two disturbances recorded Thursday and Friday, neither of which has been determined as to location.

While the disturbance still was in progress a second tremor, apparently entirely distinct from the first and centering approximately 3,500 miles from Washington began to affect the needles of the Georgetown seismographs. Its primary shocks began at 1:54:45 p. m., eastern time and its secondary shocks at 2:02:25 p. m.

Break in Cable Near Honolulu
NEW YORK, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—The break in the mid-way-Guam cable of the Commercial Cable Company, reported yesterday occurred somewhere near Honolulu and may have been caused by earth tremors, officials of the company said today. They said they had not received a report on the cause of the break.

All America cables reported its lines down but the west coast of South America were not affected.

Either In Japan Or China
DENVER, COLO., February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—A message from an observer at Regis College said that he believed the disturbances recorded today occurred in China and Japan.

NEW YORK, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Belief that the earthquake recorded today on seismographs all over the country, was centralized south of Japan, possibly in the Philippines, was expressed at the American Museum of Natural History.

ST. LOUIS, MO., February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—It was announced this afternoon at the seismographical observatory at St. Louis University that the registered earthquake appeared to be as violent as the San Francisco quake in 1906.

Dig For Pot Of Gold

MANHATTAN, KANSAS, Feb. 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Undaunted by the fact that the hole they had dug was so deep they had struck water, a party of negroes today continued to dig in search of a "pot of gold" in the back yard of Mrs. Amanda Cruz's home here. It was in a dream that Mrs. Cruz "saw" the pot of gold coins. Having a reputation among negroes as a clairvoyant, a number of volunteers at once began search at the point designated by Mrs. Cruz. Today the hole extended over most of the back yard and 30 feet deep. A pump was used to remove the water seeping in.

"It is a sure way not to get reparations, I think," he said.

DRAMATIC CAPTURE OF RUM RUNNERS

NEW YORK, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Rum runners suffered two casualties early today in extensive landing operations from the liquor fleet off the Jersey coast overnight. With drawn revolvers customs officers seized the ocean-going tug John L. Cann, arresting three men and seizing 600 cases. The other casualty occurred when coast guards captured the motor boat Rose on the ocean beach a mile south of Highlands.

Advises received from Highlands stated that bottle fishermen, taking advantage of the fog, clearing ice and smooth seas, put out in good numbers to the rum fleet of 19 vessels moored off the Ambrose channel lightship.

Much Liquor Seized
Just how many small craft succeeded in running the blockade could not be definitely ascertained, but truck movements this morning indicated that a considerable amount of liquor had been landed. It was believed in Highlands that all but one of the local rum runners had returned safely.

The motor boat Rose, however, fell into the hands of coast guards before her crew had been able to land all her cargo. She had not been claimed this morning by her owner, who was reported among Highlands residents to be a public official. According to reports current in bootlegging circles, the owner of the Rose decided to vary his program and ordered his crew instead of slipping into the Shrewsbury river, to land on the ocean beach where preparations were made to meet the craft with automobiles. The landing was made and most of the cargo landed into automobiles and driven away.

Before the last had been cleared however, coast guards commanded by Francis Downes and William Brown, descended on the craft and seized her with eleven cases of liquor intact. Most of the bottles which had been left on the craft when the raiders appeared, were broken by the crew before they jumped from the boat and escaped.

Being Washed To Pieces
The Rose, equipped with a powerful automobile engine, was one of the fastest craft on the Northern Jersey shore. This morning under the eye of coast guards she was being washed to pieces on the beach.

The seizure of the Cann was dramatic. John Regan, deputy collector of customs at Perth Amboy, N. J., and Customs Inspector John L. Murphy, were cruising about in the fog in their launch Gaddy between Staten Island and Port Reading, N. J., when they heard the voice of a maritime salesman say coolly, "Come and get it. All you want. It's yours at $50 a case."

The Gaddy crept forward cautiously.

Bare Jail Flight Plot

MARYSVILLE, O., February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—What is believed to have been a plan on the part of Mrs. Eva Katherine Kaber, Cleveland murderess, to escape from the woman's reformatory here where she is serving a life sentence for the murder of her husband, has been uncovered by Mrs. Louise Mittenford, superintendent of the institution. A letter signed "A Friend" came to Mrs. Kaber last week written in code, which officers have as yet been unable to decode and it is believed that if the key to the code can be discovered, a jail delivery plan will come to light. Superintendent Mittenford said that she is confident that in some manner Mrs. Kaber is communicating with friends on the outside, although the exact medium of transmission has not yet been discovered.

Zero Weather On Way For Ohioans

COLUMBUS, O., February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—The coldest weather of the winter was forecast for Ohio for tonight by the United States Weather Bureau. A minimum temperature of zero was predicted for central and southern Ohio, while a below zero minimum was forecast for northern Ohio.

The cold wave, according to the forecaster, is due to reach Ohio this afternoon, but will be short lived. By Monday normal temperatures should prevail again, the forecaster announced. The Ohio forecast issued this morning said:

Generally fair with severe cold wave tonight, except snow, flurries near Lake Erie. Sunday fair and colder in east portion.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—The impending cold wave scheduled by the weather bureau to strike the eastern seaboard within the next twenty-four hours, will cover an immense expanse of territory, according to a supplementary forecast issued today. The lower lake region, Ohio Valley, Tennessee and Atlantic states as far south as the northern portions of Georgia and South Carolina, will be included, the bureau predicted.

Zero temperatures were reported today in Southern Kansas. The lowest temperature reported was 40 below at White River, Ont.

Jesse Barker, switchman, and Carl Day, special officer, were wounded. The officers, according to our version of the fight, approached the railroad men to inquire concerning a volley of pistol shots. It was claimed by surviving officers, the Barkers resented the questioning and the gun fight followed. Surface indications early today were that the situation was quiet.

Plain States Are Swept By Severe Cold Wave

CHICAGO, February 3.—(By the Associated Press)—A blast of winter from the northwest that caused sudden drops of temperature in the plain states last night, was overspreading the United States today. It was predicted that the cold wave would embrace the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the interior of the East Gulf States not later than tonight, reaching the Atlantic States from North Carolina northward by tomorrow.

From the far northwest to Florida, from New York to San Francisco, weather disturbances of a greater or lesser degree of intensity were reported in progress or were forecast.

In the northwest the cold wave brought the lowest temperature of the winter to St. Paul and Minneapolis, the thermometer dropping to 37 degrees below zero early today. Similar drops in temperature occurred throughout Minnesota and North and South Dakota. Snow was reported in some districts.

The wave arrived at Omaha on the wings of a high northwest wind and the thermometer dropped 30 degrees to zero in ten hours. Snow storms and temperatures steadily dropping to and below zero were announced in Eastern Nebraska and Western Ohio.

Chicago's long continued mild weather was routed by the van guard of the cold wave that caused the thermometer to drop nearly 20 degrees to 15 above in a few hours. The advent of the cold was marked by a sharp northwest wind.

From Memphis, Tenn., it was reported that heavy rainfalls throughout the Mississippi Valley and Ohio river district had caused forecasters to anticipate the Mississippi river reaching flood stage early next week. Cessation of rainfall has promised to be followed by a cold wave tonight and Sunday.

Weather disturbances in the South mostly were confined to wind and rain storms, the most destructive occurring in the vicinity of Savage, Miss., where scores of persons were reported injured and considerable property damaged.

A cold wave was predicted for the southeast, to be felt slightly today and a little more pronounced Sunday, but certainly as to the time of its arrival was in doubt because of certain low pressure areas.

The cold spell, which was predicted to grip the entire southeast, and be felt as far south as Florida, would last for several days, the forecaster said.

Bishop To Reply To Rector On "Personal Religion"

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Announcement today that Bishop Manning of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York would deliver a series of lectures at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on "The arrival of a personal religion" was viewed as the latest development in the controversy between the Bishop and Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, Rector of the Church of the Ascension.

Although the announcement made no mention of the controversy, which broke out when Bishop Manning called on the rector to resign or recant a sermon questioning the deity of Christ, nevertheless the lectures will cover some of the questions in dispute between the two churchmen. Included among the topics of the first of a series of lectures ever delivered at the Cathedral are: "The grounds for our belief in our Lord Jesus Christ as God" and "The present crisis with regard to marriage and the home."

Dr. Grant today declined to comment on the letter which he received yesterday from the Bishop indicating that the rector would not be brought to trial for heresy, rebuking Dr. Grant, who is engaged to Mrs. Rita D'Acosta Lydig, a divorcee, and for his "advocacy of easy divorce."

Davis Behind Move For Four Year Term

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 3.—The continuance in political affairs of Ohio of former Governor Harry L. Davis is seen in a statement issued to the newspapers from his office here today by Davis. The statement reiterates the former chief executive's convictions of a four instead of a two year term for Governor, and announces that now he is out of office, he will launch a direct movement for a constitutional amendment to change the tenure of office of the Governor to a single four year term.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known
Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, dark skin, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headache, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, get take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—and then just to keep them in the box.—Advertisement.

Public Co-Operation Necessary

"I have preferred to wait until after expiration of my term as governor before launching the movement," he went on, "so the action might not be construed as due to a wish to benefit by it myself. Now that I am out of office my desire to be of continuing public service as a private citizen, further has induced me to start this movement. For it to be successful, however, and for the people of the state to see it translated into necessary action, their active interest and co-operation is absolutely essential."

"How much dividends," he continued, "measured by private business standards, could be expected from an enterprise that spends something like $200,000,000 a year, but whose executive head leaves it ever so often, drifting leaderless for greatly protracted periods?"

Ohio Has This Handicap

"Surely no such private enterprise, with its operations seriously interrupted for many months at a stretch, could long survive.

"Nevertheless, the people of Ohio for a long time have had to put up with just that sort of a handicap in the administration of their affairs in the state government.

"I am aware, fully, in advancing this plan, with a view of having the electors pass on it as a constitutional amendment, that it will meet considerable opposition, but I do count that knowing it will come mostly from sources that for various reasons want it to be held as frequently as possible."

authority of the League of Nations or any other jurisdiction except her own. Russia says she won't recognize it.

Mosul Deadlock Unbroken

THIS remark relative to the Straits of Constantinople links up Russia's case with the dispute between Turkey and England, which the British consider more immediately threatening than even the Ruhr situation.

The Turkish envoys at Lausanne and Lord Curzon, the British representative, are deadlocked still, over control of the rich Turkish oil province of Mosul. Lord Curzon wants to submit the controversy to the League of Nations. The Turks, fearful of England's influence with the League, won't do this. They propose to let Mosul decide for itself, by a popular vote. The English, knowing the result would be Turkish, refuse this plebiscite proposition.

It's a deadlock which certainly would cause war but for one thing which may possibly prevent it. Everybody knows that such a war, so far as England is concerned, would be a fight in behalf of British oil interests, and it's pretty doubtful if the London government will dare brave the anger of the masses of English people by engaging in it, whatever Lord Curzon may threaten.

Ruhr Venture's Status

AS a military enterprise, France's occupation of the Ruhr is a good deal of a success, but as a damage collecting undertaking up to date it's proved a flat fizzle. What the French are getting out of the Germans now, the former's own leaders admit, is less than they were getting before the invasion started.

French troops have succeeded in drawing a curtain all around the occupied district and cutting it off from the rest of Germany, but nearly everything's tied up by a strike. Even if a prolonged stay, which is what they're prepared for, the French could accomplish something, will their own people wait that long? Thus far, the invasion's only an expense to them, not only in money out of pocket for their troops, but in disorganized business and in the depreciation of the franc in international money markets. Already people are wondering how long the present French cabinet will last, as public doubt increases concerning the wisdom of the Ruhr venture.

Mr. Wertz Recovers

Charles V. Wertz of Fourth street has recovered from an attack of grip.

Is Improving

Mrs. Jasper Gillum, who is ill with rheumatism at her home on the West Side, is improving.

Domestic trouble is given as the cause of the suicide. It was only yesterday that Attorney Edgar Miller, on behalf of Mrs. Kuhns filed her suit for alimony in the local court. Due notice was to have been served upon Kuhns today by deputy sheriff. Dale Kuhns, 13, and Eva Kuhns, 16, children of Mr. Kuhns, were the last to see him alive and to talk with him. Mrs. Kuhns left the house early Thursday evening and it was probably several hours afterwards that Kuhns ended his life.

The fact that livestock locked up in the barns was suffering for lack of feed and water seemed to be of more interest to neighboring farmers than the suicide itself for as soon as officers entered the house and found the body several farmers remarked "Let's go feed the stock and take care of the animals" and they hastened away to the barn while the officers conducted an investigation.

Deputies Schneider and Clark after examining the body sent in a call for Coroner Virgil Fowler and he arrived at the Kuhns home about midnight. The deputy sheriffs meeting the Coroner at Minford on their return trip. William Thompson, deputy in the office of Probate Judge Gilliland, lives in Madison township and directed the officers to the Kuhns home. The farm is within a short distance of the Jackson and Pike county line, and when the man's absence was reported last night it was at first thought that it was a case for Pike county authorities.

Mrs. Kuhns and several of her children left the home Wednesday after the wife and husband had several quarrels and he had threatened them bodily harm and also threatened to take his life. His daughter Eva, who attended high school at Stockdale and her brother Dale, remained at the home but Thursday the father ordered her to leave and again remarked that he was going to take his own life. The boy left Thursday afternoon. According to Eva, her father remained about the house all day Thursday and acted strangely. He kept his shoes off until early in the evening when he put them on and remarked "I am going out to feed the stock and I am going to give them a good one for it will be the last." Early in the afternoon he gave Dale his pocketbook containing $1.00 and his pocket knife.

The deputy sheriffs found the lifeless form in the small bed room of the home between two beds. His head was pillowed on old overalls and his feet were near the door. The body was stretched out and it is thought that he was probably sitting down when he fired. The gun, broken down, was found under the bed several feet from the body and it is thought that the recoil of the gun caused it to fly back that far. Coroner Fowler examined the body and found that Kuhns had prepared himself for death by lowering the lid of his overalls and opening his shirt and undershirt. The flesh was burned, so close was the gun to the body when the shot was fired. The hole in the abdomen was as big as the end of the barrel of the gun.

In another room the drawer of an old bureau was found open just far enough for the man to reach in and take a shell from a box in a corner of the drawer.

Yesterday afternoon Attorney Edgar Miller, representing Mrs. Kuhns, filed suit in Common Pleas Court seeking alimony. In filing the suit, Attorney Miller requested that summons be served on Kuhns today, and that he be ordered to appear in court Monday to set forth his claims in the case. Deputy Sheriff Carter was planning to serve the papers in the case this morning.

In her petition, Mrs. Kuhns says they were married in 1906, and that they have nine children, three of whom are minors. Dale, aged 13, Nellie, aged 15, and Eva, aged 16.

She sets forth that Kuhns threatened upon numerous occasions to kill her or to kill himself, and that by reason of his threats, she was forced to leave him.

The wife asked for the household goods and two cows as temporary alimony, and that, at the final settlement of the case, she be allowed a reasonable permanent alimony.

The other children are Bessie, Opal, Cora, Leota, Charles and Edith. Edith who teaches a rural school, Eva, Nellie and Dale had lived at the home.

Kuhns was a man about 35 years of age, and had lived in the White Gravel neighborhood for about twenty-five years. Neighbors had noticed that he was acting peculiarly the past few weeks, they said, and expressed the opinion that he was probably unbalanced over some domestic trouble.

He was an upright citizen in his dealings with them, they say, although they knew he possessed a high temper, and was inclined to give way to spells of despondency.

Coroner Fowler turned the body over to undertaker Davis of Beaver who will have charge of funeral and burial services to be held at White Gravel probably Sunday.

Farmer's Body Found With Gaping Hole In Abdomen

After deliberately preparing himself for the coming of death, by rolling up old overalls for a pillow, removing his shoes, unfastening the bib of his overalls and opening his shirt and undershirt so the muzzle of the shotgun would be as close against his body as possible, George Kuhns, well known farmer of the White Gravel community, Madison township, committed suicide probably Thursday evening by sending a load from a single barrel 12 gauge shotgun through his abdomen. Death, according to Coroner Virgil Fowler who examined the body late last night, was probably instantaneous as the shot made a big wound in the stomach, broke three ribs and just barely missed the heart. The lifeless body was found about ten o'clock last night by Deputy Sheriffs Carl Schneider and Henry Clark who went to the home to investigate after neighbors had called Sheriff Dunham's office and said that they were sure something had happened at the house as the man's stock had not been fed all day and no smoke had been seen coming from the chimney of the house. Word that Kuhns had threatened to take his life of late had also become known in the neighborhood and neighboring farmers were afraid to approach the house to investigate, as they feared that Kuhns might shoot at them.

Three Future Judgments

At the revival at the United Brethren church, corner of Seventh and Gay streets, the special subject to be discussed Sunday night at seven o'clock is "The Three Future Judgments."

There are seven judgments mentioned in the Scriptures, three yet in the future. While the "Great White Throne Judgment" will receive large consideration some time will be given to showing the different circumstances under which these future judgments are to occur.

The Sunday evening service is announced for seven o'clock and judging from the interest shown at the services during the week it will be wise to come early in order to get a good seat in the lower floor of the auditorium.

The usual spiritual congregational singing will prevail in this service accompanied by both the organ and piano and the choir will sing a special gospel anthem. Other special

(Bulletin)
At two o'clock Saturday afternoon when River Observer F. B. Winter made a special reading of the local river gauge the stage here was 42.9, a rise of .7 of a foot since 7 o'clock this morning. The rate of rise was a trifle over an inch an hour.

While the Ohio river continued to climb slowly in the Portsmouth district and all points from Point Pleasant down Saturday morning when a stage of 42.2 feet was registered here, it was indicated by reports that not more than an additional foot of water will be received here on the present rise. The river was falling at Pittsburg, Parkersburg and Charleston.

River men predicted this morning that the bulk of the water on the present rise will have passed here by tonight and that the stream will become stationary Sunday. They point out that the cold wave which reached this section last night will serve as a check on the rise of the river which is expected to commence falling in this district within thirty-six hours. The "X" road, West Side, is now submerged under nearly four feet of water and persons living on the Lower River road are compelled to travel by the way of Union Mills. With the indications that the water will reach little more than the 43 ft. mark there is small likelihood of the Towpath road being covered as it requires a stage of 45 feet to put water there and even more to shut off travel.

Many hours behind their schedules, due to fog, the Andes departed at 3 a. m. for Cincinnati, and the Greenwood passed up last night bound for Charleston.

The official river bulletin received at ten o'clock showed that the rainfall at up-river points was very light yesterday, Huntington having the heaviest with only .44 of an inch while Ashland reported .40. The rainfall here was only .15.

From Friday afternoon at two o'clock when a special reading of the local gauge was made by local River Observer F. B. Winter until seven o'clock this morning the rise here was 18 inches in 17 hours. This rate of rise declines as the stream falls at points above and as the body of water widens.

Orchard Meetings

F. H. Beach, specialist in Horticulture O. S. U. will demonstrate proper methods of pruning and training young apple and peach trees at the farms of J. A. Johnson, Sedan, and Zeller Bros., Lucasville, next week.

These orchards are two of the three orchards in the county in which blocks of 40 or 50 trees are under the training and direction of the county agent and specialist to demonstrate proper pruning, training and management of young trees, where annual meetings will be held to prune the trees and discuss orchard management with growers interested in the development of young orchards. The meeting at the Zeller orchard will be held Tuesday, Feb. 6, at 1 p. m., and at the Johnson orchard 10 a. m. to which the public is invited.

The other demonstration orchard is to be on the farm of Orel Dever, Minford, which will be planted this spring. Assistance was given in the collection of varieties and stock in all of these orchards and are considered as permanent demonstration orchards. Each one contains about 40 acres. Arrangements have not yet been made for the first meeting at the Dever orchard but will probably be held at planting time or shortly afterwards.

"Breeding dairy heifers too young retards their growth and lowers production," says C. C. Hayden, chief in dairy husbandry at the Ohio Experiment Station.

"The best breeders of dairy cattle do not allow their heifers to be bred before they are seventeen months old.

and not until later unless they are well grown.

"Rites followed by our best breeders are usually safe because they are based on investigation and experience. A heifer bred at 12 to 14 months of age may have trouble at calving time, her growth is stunted and not until late in life, if ever, does she make as large a cow, or become as saleable as one bred later.

"Heifers that are well fed from the start, may be bred younger than if they are fed sparingly at any time."

HOW TO USE VICKS VAPORUB FOR DEEP GRIPPY COLDS

First, It Is Very Important That a Thorough Rubefacient Of Counter-Irritant Effect Be Produced On The Surface Of The Skin around the Lungs.

This Draws the Blood From the Congested Lungs and Lessens the Danger of Pneumonia.

THEN TREAT WITH VICKS

Deep, grippy colds, frequently leading to pneumonia, have been unusually prevalent this winter. In some sections they are called influenza cases during the first epidemic, though they are worse than ordinary colds. For these cases the usual light application of Vicks is not sufficient.

The Danger Is From Pneumonia

What is needed therefore is something to decrease the congestion of the lungs. For this purpose there is nothing like a rubefacient or counter-irritant, as witness the use of blisters, poultices and plasters for many generations. This reddening or irritation of the skin causes a rush of blood to the surface; the circulation is improved; there is a sensation of warmth and the possibility of pneumonia is greatly lessened.

A "Quick" Rubefacient Needed

The value of this counter-irritant effect is greatly increased if it is produced quickly. Nearly every family has its favorite method—onion poultices, turpentine stipes—mustard plasters and poultices of various kinds are all good.

How To Produce This Effect

Our experiments have shown that an ordinary mustard plaster is very effective. Use one part of mustard to two parts of flour or flaxseed meal for adults, and one to three parts for children under eight years. An even simpler method, particularly for adults, is to apply towels, wrung out in very hot water—as hot as the patient can stand. Whatever method is used, the application should be applied over the throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. In very deep colds, the sides and especially the back from the middle of the shoulder blades to a point just above the waist, should also be treated. For adults, a hot mustard foot-bath—one tablespoon of mustard to a gallon of water—given at this stage of the treatment, will aid in drawing the blood from the congested parts.

Then Massage With Vicks

After the skin is thoroughly reddened it should be dried lightly and immediately the patient should be given a brisk massage with Vicks all over the parts. Continue this for five minutes. This increases the counter-irritant effect. Then apply Vicks thickly over all the parts; that is, spread it on like you would a poultice—about one-sixteenth of an inch thick or more—and cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths.

Vicks Acts Like a Vapor Lamp

The advantage of applying Vicks thickly over the body is this: Vicks is so made that the body heat gradually releases the ingredients in the form of vapors. The more Vicks applied, the stronger will be the vapors and the longer these vapors will last. The night clothing should always be loose around the neck and the bed clothes arranged in the form of a funnel. These vapors being lighter than air rise up from the chest and, if the bed clothing is properly arranged, pass by the nose and mouth and are thus inhaled with each breath carrying the medication directly thru the air passages.

We have a lesson on prayer for Sunday. It is important that we know as much as possible about this subject. "Prayer changes things." How many times we endure or permit a thing to take place that could be avoided by the use of our privilege of prayer. This lesson will help all who study it to make more effective and intelligent use of prayer.

Our services are intended to lead up to the city-wide revival. We would appreciate the presence of every member. Hear the sermons and attend the prayer meetings and you will be an asset rather than a liability to the big revival.

Victim Had Fought In Three Armies During War

William Ainsmoudt, aged 38, machinist, who entered the employ of the N. & W. just twenty days ago, was instantly killed at 6:45 Friday evening when run down by a yard engine as he was crossing the X & W tracks at the tunnel under the "lump" at the Terminal, East Portsmouth.
A John Dulkar, a friend of Ainsmoudt was with the latter when he was killed.
Stepping across the first track toward the south the two men were caught between the eastbound and westbound yard engines. Dulkar stood still on the small space between the two tracks and was uninjured. Ainsmoudt was caught on the eastbound track and met a tragic death, his head and left hand severed from the body. His head was picked up along the track and his arm and body were found under the engine light as it bore down on them.
Then I noticed that another engine was coming down westbound track, and I stood very still, as close to the west bound engine as I could. I did not have time to warn my friend. It all happened in a moment. I heard the engineer cry out, heard my friend's cry, and then saw that Will had been hit."

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—I am a married woman of 22 and was married in Kentucky and I want to know if I can get a divorce in Ohio.

TIMES READER
You will have to be a resident of this state one year before you can file application for a divorce. For further information on the subject would advise you to consult an attorney, or go back to your husband and patch up your troubles.

Dear Miss Wise—To whom may I write concerning the Ohio State bonus. I am an Ohio soldier and have never received any bonus.

II. H.
Write to State Compensation Director, Robert R. Roberts, Columbus, Ohio. You should have settled this matter long ago.

Dear Miss Wise—Can you tell me where to get a good book on etiquette, one that would give good sensible instructions on manners? Also one on "How to Play Bridge?"

MRS. R. H.
If you will inquire at one of the local book stores they will recommend a good book on etiquette. Are you reading the little squibs that are printed in The Times each evening?

If you will clip those out and paste them in a small note book you will soon have all the information you want on this subject. We have also been running a series of easy lessons on how to play bridge each Sunday for the past few weeks. If you have missed them you can also get the instructions where you buy the game, but if you know anyone who plays bridge they could teach you to play quicker than you could learn from the directions.

Dear Miss Wise—As you answer all questions, I would like for you to answer mine, so as to settle an argument. Dolly, is it the law now that every person under eighteen must be off the street as soon or after the curfew blows? Also what is good to make your hair grow?

THANKS
The curfew is supposed to be for boys and girls under 16 but I notice they don't pay much attention to it, as you can always find boys of that age and under on the streets after nine o'clock. Rub vasoline or olive oil into your scalp for your hair.

Dear Miss Dolly—Will you kindly inform me in the next edition of your paper where I could get Henrik Ibsen's, "Ranpere and Galleen."

ANXIOUS TO KNOW
Did you inquire at the library or book stores?

Mrs. Robinson Tells How She Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Amarillo, Tex.—"My back was my greatest trouble. It would ache so that I would almost kill me and I would have cramps and suffer in this way about three years; then a lady friend suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had better health since, keep house and am able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends as it has certainly given me great relief."

—Mrs. C. B. Robinson, 608 N. Lincoln St., Amarillo, Texas.

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for women. It relieves the troubles which cause such symptoms as backache, painful times, irregularity, tired and worn-out feelings and nervousness. This is shown again and again by such letters as Mrs. Robinson writes as well as by one woman telling another. These women know what it did for them. It is surely worth your trial.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties.

Resignation!

Don't try forehead that would say I am yours forever.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

In certain Indian tribes, the suitors for a girl's hand sends a friend to her parents with a string of beads.

If the match is suitable and the gift large enough, the beads are kept and the pair engaged. Otherwise, the string is returned or more beads are demanded.

The custom is not so general as it once was, but has not entirely disappeared, even among Indians who are nearly, if not quite, as highly civilized as their white neighbors.

Adventures of The Twins

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Y OULL never guess who the next person was that came to the hickory tree postoffice in the woods where the twins were working.

It was Light Fingers, the mischievous little rascal who did tricks in things like that for Twelve Toes the Sorcerer.

"I—please, sir, and please, ma'am, is there any mail for Mr. Twelve Toes?" asked Light Fingers, as meek as Moses.

"I'll look," answered Nancy, "but I don't think anybody would write him a letter when he's so mean."

"Well, maybe he did anyway," said Light Fingers. "Will you please look?"

So Nancy looked and didn't see find a big square envelope with a stamp on it, addressed to Mr. T. Toes Esquire, Dark Cave, Seven Mountains County, Fairland.

"Why here's one after all," she said, handing it over to the little messenger, who trotted away with it as fast as he could go.

But it wasn't 10 minutes before he was back, still holding the big square envelope in his hand. Only this time it had been opened. For little rugged edges were sticking up all round, the Twins could see.

"Mr. Twelve Toes says he won't have it and you'll have to take it back," said Light Fingers. "It's from the Sour Old Witch Under the Waterfall and it's an ugly valentine and when he read it he stormed up and down until I thought he was going to turn inside out. You read it and see for yourself."

So Nancy and Nick and Nancy read it and the others listened. And this is what it said:

"Oh, Mr. Twelve Toes! Has a terrible nose. And wherever he goes, it's as red as a rose."

"Oh, Mr. Twelve Toes! Has the crookiest ears. And I'll tell you, my dears, it's a wonder he hears."

"Oh, Mr. Twelve Toes! Has the weeniest eyes. It's no wonder he cries. When he looks at himself in the looking glass."

BRINGING UP FATHER

CINCINNATI AUTO SHOW OPENS FEB. 7

Since most things nowadays are figured in dollars and cents, it is best to get an idea of the big Cincinnati Auto Show, running from Wednesday, February 7th to Wednesday, February 14th, from the fact that it is costing slightly more than $50,000 to put on. In years gone by there were two big shows in the country and others were relatively small affairs. For this year, however, the Cincinnati Automobile Dealers' Association set out to put the Cincinnati Show on a par with those of New York and Chicago, and the first step was to appropriate enough money to make it possible for people of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia to see a real metropolitan Auto Show in a city right near their own homes.

An experienced show manager was brought from New York last October to conduct the exhibition and all plans have been made since that time and are laid on the biggest possible scale. The elaborate decorations alone filled four freight cars and are the last word in scenic display.

Perhaps the real feature of the Show, next of course to the autos themselves, is the unique lighting system. Music Hall in Cincinnati where the Show is held is a wonderfully spacious auditorium, and it will literally be ablaze with light from end to end. A battery of 24 powerful searchlights will flood the entire street and the front of the building and the approach to the doorway. This approach will be made of a flight of tall white pillars covered over with masses of smilax, covering a deep area in front of the main entrance 50 feet long. As visitors come through this arched effect they will be greeted by the most imposing spectacle the Middle West has ever seen symbolized of a Nation's progress. Absolutely without glare or discomfort, the interior of the Hall will be lighted to five times the brilliancy of normal illumination.

Three orchestras will entertain the spectators, combining at times into one 70 piece company for rendering special numbers. Not satisfied with any ordinary music, the management has obtained from the country's best eastern music publishing houses a large number of especially arranged orchestrations of popular pieces, in which the parts are arranged to exactly suit the various instruments played in these particular orchestras.

Practically every recognized make and model of car will be shown during the eight days from Wednesday to Wednesday inclusive, February 7 to 14. Thousands and thousands of people see the big Auto Shows each year and this year there will be a considerable number of visitors from this city and county at Cincinnati.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN HANNON, wealthy ranch owner, his blind wife, BELLE, and their beautiful daughter, VAL, live happily together in Hannon's wonderful ranch home, Paradise. Redstar is the king of the Hot Blood of horses owned by the master of the ranch. In a game at HUNNEWELL'S store, VELANTRIE from the Border wins LOLO SANCHEZ, who offers herself as stake for BILDEMAN, man of mystery. Velantrie sends Lola home to her father.

Val attends the Fourth of July celebration at Santa Leandra. Escorted by the Paradise cowboys in the afternoon, Val watches the races where the Hot Blood wins honors. At the dance in the evening Val dances the first dance with TOM BRISTON, the foreman of Paradise, who loves Val sincerely.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

These strangers came in unostentatiously and stood in a bunch, somewhat close together. There were nine of them, all clad in good garments, the best that money could buy in a wider market than the rangeland owned. Their soft fine boots were stitched in colors, their hats were very wide and ornamented with much silver after the fashion of their kind across the line.

They stood quietly and watched the dancers, and in their midst stood one who was of a different mold. Tall, slim, fine of feature and form, smiling, his reckless face a sparkle with the joy of youth in music and motion, this man was not so guardedly alert, and he carried his hat in his hand. Thick black hair waved back from a handsome brow, white with the bleach of the sweatband, sign manual of him who rides much in the open.

His blue eyes under their black lashes roved over the dancers with a bright bold glance.

As the couples drifted out again Lolo Sanchez, a living flower in her black and scarlet, came down the room in the arms of a big blond boy, her small face upturned, her coquette's heart playing the old game in her dusky eyes.

And then—the boy swung her past the door and she looked up full into the smiling face of the stranger.

"Velantrie!" she breathed to her self.

"What?" asked the boy, but she did not hear.

From that moment she forgot him utterly.

When the dance ended Lolo stopped, as if by accident—something about the tiny slipper that encased her light foot—bent and straightened it—close by the door. As she rose, quick as a willow wand released, she looked into Velantrie's eyes and her own were eloquent.

"Master!" she murmured in Spanish, so low that none but he caught the soft word.

"Who's th' chap by th' door?" the blond boy asked suspiciously, but Lolo looked up innocently.

"Which one?" she asked, and the suspicion died.

The newcomers did not dance. They had come because Velantrie gave the word, because he chose to look upon Santa Leandra at her merry-making, and that was all.

Velantrie did not dance either. There was none whom he knew upon the floor save and except the small girl who called him master, and he only smiled with amusement as he watched her.

But Lolo Sanchez's quick little brain was working and she meant to change that very soon. Therefore she sent the least of her followers, a meek brown Mexican, unnoticeable in the crowd, to whisper something in the fiddler's ear.

And then the music stopped, the crowds drifted to the benches, and the fiddler was tuning his fiddle to another key.

He tucked the fiddle in his neck and began abruptly to play—and no one called his number.

Wild, swift, beautiful music it was, Spanish to the core.

It lifted and swung and at regular intervals there came a thrum of the bass that sounded like the stroke of a foot upon the floor. And then, softly, swiftly, like a leaf before a wind, Lolo Sanchez came drifting down the floor alone. From somewhere as if by magic she had drawn a pair of castanets, and these began to snap and click as her hands rose above her head.

As she was a beautiful thing! Young, slim, small, graceful as a gazelle, her little body bent and swayed, whirled and dipped and circled, like a flame in the breeze.

Stamp—whirl—bend—hands waved, castanets clicking, she went down the long room, circled its farther end and came drifting up along the other side. Necks were craned, feet drawn back to give her room, for she was dancing close. And then, suddenly it seemed, she was opposite Velantrie where he stood beside the door.

Out to the center she went as if she sprang the crowd, then swift as a winged thing she darted toward him, threw back her little head, smiled straight in his eyes and held out her hands, palms up.

It was a challenge, direct, daring, pretty.

For one second the man hesitated. Then he tossed his broad hat to those behind, sprang forward and caught those outstretched hands.

Lolo's eyes were liquid light as she drew him into the clear, snatched her hands away, tossed them above her head, and began to dance in earnest. The stranger, too, began to dance, and those who watched saw instantly that the girl had made no false choice of partners. He placed a hand on his belted hip, raised the other to touch her cheek, log fingers now and again, and he too, swayed and dipped and circled, though in a lesser fashion, to give background to her brilliance, the subtle and perfect accompaniment to a wonderful performance.

Lolo was a rose in the night, a wind in the twilight, a laugh and a jest and a challenge. Velantrie, the stranger, was a young tree in a storm, a cloud hard blown by winds, and the thunder of his booted heels rolled under the lightning of the castanets.

"Great snakes!" said Perly, softly, "ain't that amazin'?"

He spoke to nobody in particular, but the blond boy who stood beside him cleared his throat as if with an effort and Val Hannon on the other side glanced up. The boy's face was pale as milk and his blue eyes were narrowed to cold points.

Down the room and back again went the two. Lolo was all about Velantrie, coaxing, spurring, challenging, and all the while her little face was full of light that shone for all to see.

As if by artless chance she drew the figure gracefully toward the far side of the floor, directly before the blond boy, and she was utterly irresistible. Butterflies in the breeze, stars that glittered, fires at night—she was all of them, and now's pulses throbbed drunkenly to behold her.

And then, as the music rose to one last keening, she fled straight to Velantrie, sank backward in his reaching arm, and held up her flower face toward him, unmistakable in its intent, his invitation.

Half under her spell the man hesitated a fraction of a second. The perfect action of the steps and the music lost its first heat in that second's wait. Lolo's face glowed deeper—and Velantrie bent.

"By—" came a choking whisper as the blond boy, gray as ashes and cold, reached to his lip.

There was a flash of metal, a step forward—and in that second Val Hannon beside him dropped a lightning-quick hand on his shoulder and swung him round in action—as she had so often swung her dad. There was an oath, a shot that went wild and landed in Hunnewell's tray on the platform's edge across the room, and Velantrie, arrested halfway to Lolo's siren lips, looked straight past the boy and into the blazing black eyes of the girl who had saved his life.

For one sharp moment the tension held.

Then Velantrie slowly straightened up and Lolo slipped from his arm, forgotten as she had forgotten the blond boy. He stood still, breathing hard, his blue eyes fastened on Val's face, a frown between them.

From all sides men crowded in, pushed between and hustled the boy away, while from that other side of the room Velantrie's followers came like a bold, solid pack, their faces aflame and keen, their hands on their guns, ready.

"Steady, boys," said Velantrie, "there's nothing wrong."

Then he made one stride to Val, reached out a hand and smiled. It was the brilliant lighting of his face, like fire behind a curtain, that was his chief charm.

"I've had many a close call," he said simply, "and have done some sharp tricks to beat them myself, but I never saw a prettier piece of work than that. The quick thought, the quick action—they were like a man, a keen man, used to desperate chances, and I never saw a woman before who could think and act like that. If you knew me," he finished frankly, "perhaps you would not take my hand. But I want to thank you."

Gravely Val looked full into his brilliant eyes. The light and the laughter of the earlier night were gone from her face, why she could not have told to save her life, yet it was not because of the near tragedy, that she knew.

"Yes," she said as simply, "I will take your hand."

And her firm brown fingers closed around his in a strong clasp. The smile died on the man's face and he looked into hers for another long moment.

Then he loosed her hand and turned away.

"I shall not forget," he said.

Instantly his men closed about him, they marched across the floor among the crowd which fell back from them, filed compactly out the door and were gone.

The celebration was over in Santa Leandra. Dim shapes rode through the dust and cool surprise that presaged the dawn, and the denizens of the rangeland scattered for another year.

It was mid-morning when they rode into Paradise, and far off Val shaded her eyes with her hands and searched the familiar place.

"Boys," she said at last, "there's something wrong at home. The riders are all in and hanging round the corral. There's dad—he's waiting for us."

There was something wrong at Paradise, indeed.

John Hannon met them at the corner of the great house and his face bore signs of strain. His dark eyes were cold and narrow.

OLD FASHIONED FAMILY REMEDY

FOR COLDS, GRIP, PNEUMONIA AND BODY BUILDING

Father John's Medicine Builds New Strength During the Getting-Well Stage After Any Illness.

A Doctor's Prescription. Free From Alcohol and Dangerous Drugs—67 Years in Use.

The getting-well stage of grip is the most dangerous of all because the body weakened by the grip is wide open to attacks of other lurking disease germs.

That is why all the organs of the body must be kept in their best working order, not only to drive out the poison left by the grip germ, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system.

As a means toward good health after the grip Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure wholesome nourishment and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs or alcohol. Father John's Medicine has had sixty seven years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.

Homes and Prosperity

Every new house built gives work to the members of the building trades. The man with a job buys more clothes, shoes, furniture, stoves, groceries, perhaps the things you make or sell. Your savings with us are used exclusively in financing homes, to lower rents and provide work.

Acute and Chronic Ailments

Until the discovery of Chiropactic there was no certain way of knowing what was the CAUSE of our many ailments, neither was it known how to get rid of them.

Whatever the nature of the malady you suffer with, it is due to pressure on nerves along the sides of the backbone. This pressure interferes with nerve function; hence, inflammation, pain, and distress are manifested in whatever part or organ is supplied by the nerves.

The cut shows a section of the Backbone and how the nerves become impinged and cause disease, such as Headaches, Eyes, Ear, Nose and Throat troubles, Tonsillitis, Bronchitis, Heart and Lung Troubles, Rheumatism, Liver, Stomach, Gall Stones, Kidney trouble, Appendicitis, Constipation, Female trouble and others too numerous to mention.

Snore After Eating

The person afflicted with gas in the stomach and bowels often has a tired feeling after eating. Sometimes, in the afternoon, in some cases the fingers turn or turn "go to sleep," due to gas pressure which restricts circulation.

These annoying symptoms can be promptly relieved by taking Bismark's Gas Tablets. Bismark's Gas Tablets are harmless, pleasant and effective. Nationally known and used. For sale by The Fisher & Smith Pharmacy and leading druggists everywhere. Do not doubt. Be sure to get the genuine in the yellow package. J. Bismark, Chemist, San Francisco-Admission.

WHEN YOU CATCH COLD RUB ON MUSTEROLE

Musterole is easy to apply and it gets in its food work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into a fever or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's olive oil plaster without the blister. Musterole is a clean white ointment made of oil of mustard and other home staples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, colds on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuritis, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, etc. of all sorts. Seldom fails to deliver results. 5c and 6c jars and tubes; hospital size, $2.50.

I WAS FITTING A MAN

with a pair of shoes the other day and he asked me if I sold home made shoes and was surprised when I told him no, and he wanted to know why. I told him for the same reason why the city ought to buy Portsmouth brick in Jackson and he winked at me. I don't know what he meant, whether he had something on his mind or his hip, but he said, "Put on the mate to this pair and I'll take your word for it that they are genuine tan Norwegian calf skin with two real oak soles on the bottoms and they're cheap enough at ten fifty for they're built for service and some good lookers, too."

Not How

Cheap.

How Good.

CHEAP

THE advertising manager of a well-known eastern firm engaged in the manufacture and distribution of cosmetic on a large scale estimated that it costs on an average three dollars each annually for women of the United States to keep their varied complexions in a satisfactory condition.

Certain self-appointed reformers have been busy warning women against the physical and moral harm which is invited by the lavish use of powders and rouges, and paraphrased, ever on the alert to find something to impress their employers with the feeling that they are earning their pay, even yet speak flippantly of the extent to which women and girls practice the facial decorative art.

If the women of the United States, for an average expenditure of two dollars a year, can be kept as busy and get as much satisfaction as seems probable from the use (or is it an indulgence?) of cosmetics, what mere man should give voice to criticism? Many a man is thankful to get away from one sitting in a barber's chair for two dollars.

The complaint that women will eventually ruin their complexions by the excessive use of cosmetics seems beside the question. As a woman's complexion not her own, and if she is willing to take a gambler's chance on ruining this asset in attracting men, is not that also her own affair?

The fact that women are spending something like $100,000,000 a year for toilet accessories is a tribute to modern advertising, which in this form of publicity has reached a high type of artistic character. Periodicals devoted to the interests of women, team with advertisements of beauty specialists, and who would stop it if he could?

PROGRESS

EVER since the airplane became a fact the goal sought has been a machine which would rise straight in the air. Many have experimented, and several times we have been told that the problem was on the verge of solution. A few days ago at Dayton a helicopter in a test rose six feet straight from the ground and remained in the air one minute and forty seconds.

If the history of the development of the airplane provides an analogy, it may mean much. The first successful flights were of shorter duration, but they demonstrated that flight was possible on the lines then being worked out. A machine which rises six feet and stays in the air even less than two minutes necessarily involves the principle of overcoming gravity. Thus, something is accomplished toward the end sought, and development of the idea may come quickly, as it did with the Wrights. In view of what has been achieved in air flight, it would be a rash person who would pronounce any feat impossible and judging the future from the past, one may reasonably expect the day will come when individual airplanes will be as numerous as flippers today.

But ability to rise and alight in contracted space is indispensable to common use. The extensive taking-off and landing grounds of the present would preclude general use of the planes, were they not so unstable. With machines which can rise within their own dimensions, better control and greater safety and dependability will come also. The ideal air-carrier may not be at hand, but in considering past development and the efforts which are in progress to reach the desired end a state approaching the sought-for perfection would not be a surprising accomplishment at any time.

Magazine art these days is mostly of the near nude type. Plant doubt in the minds of some persons and it will grow faster than the gourd of Jonah.

Gradually the German mind may discover that it is Germany and not the United States which should pay the indemnity.

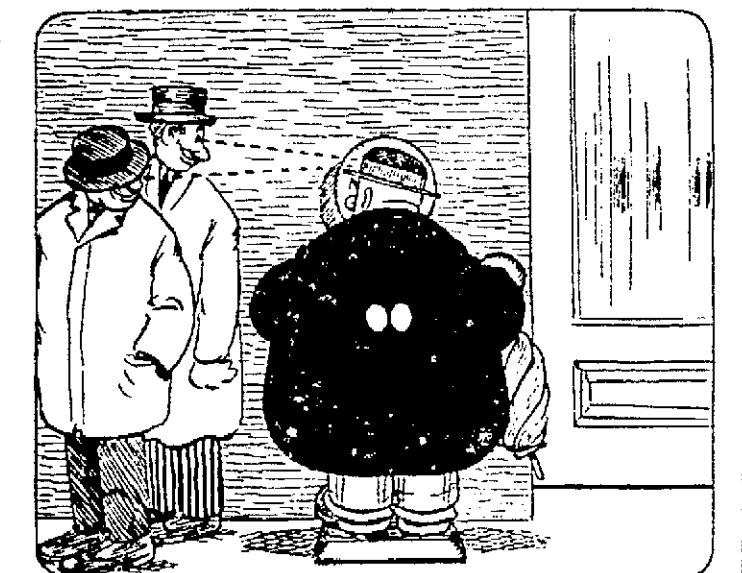

In one way the French are an improvement on German invaders. They do not shoot their prisoners before trying them.

Giving every man a job is recommended as a cure for unrest. Still, many are willing to take the money without the job.

Doubtless Paderewski finds his concert tour more profitable as well as less fatal than being president of Poland.

The outlook for a decrease in profanity this year is discouraging. Two million auto owners will buy new cars, passing the old ones on to new owners.

EVERETT TRUE BY CONDO

New York=Day=By=Day

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, February 3.—A tea kettle to hang out front, a black mummy to turn waffles, zingham to cover the walls—and lo! the old swing door rum joint on the corner becomes a tea room.

The upper west side bristles with blintz. Self supporting women are deserting their jobs by the score to become mistresses of the tea salons. Every block has its half dozen, or so. Indeed there are 15 in a block's walk in the Seventies.

They specialize in hot biscuits, home boiled hams and the like, and all appear to be prospering. There is an air of respectability that was lacking in the "red ink" palaces of yesterday. These places were adroit in filling the patron with steaming soup—and leaving the rest to the imagination.

But, my dears, they do say that above many of the west side tea rooms are apartments, in which the owners live, and where if one is considered a little bit of alright—a varying brand of liquid cheer is served. Who may prevent a hostess from serving a friendly libation? Even if it appears on the check marked as a "convert charge."

As a noble old Roman carchinated there are more ways than one to cook a goose or something like that. Ripping! No end. Each tea room has its friendly screen which may be thrown about the diner who resents the vulgar gaze of the curious.

The truth is that the tea room has brought out an army of feminine boot-leggers. They are riding hard to quick wealth—or the prison cell. And most of them are silver haired, matronly and seem entirely out of kilter with the reckless bonhomie about them.

The popularity of the neighborhood tea-room zigzags. Each new one is hailed with the loud huzzas. Some only remain open a few weeks and then close to bloom again under a new name just around the corner. It is a rollicking game of hide and seek.

Alla Nazimova—"Naz" to her intimates—is quite the talk among her friends for her peach blown complexion and svelte figure. To a few she has confided a secret. For thirty days her breakfast was a cup of hot water, her luncheon a raw egg—and a small plain vegetarian dinner completed the day.

Life Bud had his overcoat stolen in the Little Gem restaurant where he stopped to get something to eat right after attending a banquet last night. An autoist swears worse and longer when a Ford cuts in front of him than any pedestrian ever did.

Barney Gallant, the Mayor of Greenwich Village, has thrown open his Club Gallant in the purlious of Washington Square. And the ex-noscent is drifting southward for a time. The club seats only 100—and the bourgeoisie meets the chilly reception. The room is done in posters by Herb Roth, Inba Goldberg and Ralph Barton. On the cover of each chair there is a caricature of a supposed celebrity. By mistake, I presume, there is a caricature of me adorning one. I say mistake because I attempted to get in the place the other night and the lofty headwaiter gave me what is technically known as "the air."

Anyway, fame is a fugitive thing. Not so long ago in a Fifth Avenue bar store I stood near Charles M. Schwab who made a purchase. The clerk asked him his name, which was bad enough, and when it was told to him, wrote it down, "Chas. M. Swob."

She is an old and wrinkled match seller who stands near the Gaiety Theatre at night. Her lips mumble constantly and the hand that stretches out to passers by is palsied. She—an actor tells me—has educated two sons at Eastern universities.

That Evened It Up

An American had been boasting to his Irish friend about the magnificence of the Rocky Mountains.

"You seem mighty proud of them mountains," the Irishman said.

"You bet I am, and I ought to be, for my ancestors built them."

The Irishman thought this over for a few moments and then asked, "Did you ever hear of the Dead Sea?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the American. "I know all about the Dead Sea."

"Well," replied the Irishman, "did you happen to know that my great-grandfather killed the thing?"

Knew His Way

Stranger (at continental palace gates)—"This is visitors' day, is it not?"

Attendant—"Yes, sir. Shall I show you around?"

Stranger—"Oh, don't trouble. I used to be King here once."—The Passing Show (London.)

He Knows

After the clock had struck eleven, the peevish father strode to the top of the stairs and called down: "Mabel, doesn't that young man know how to say 'good night'?" "Does he?" echoed Mabel from the darkened hall below. "I'll say he does."

GOOD MANNERS

Often it is a moot question as to who should write the first letter in the event of a separation between friends. Generally speaking, it is the one who has gone away rather than the one who remains at home. However, if the friendship is very close, there is no necessity for standing strictly on formality.

Resourceful Grand Ruler

The lodge was in session and the Grand Ruler was on his high seat. There was a noticeable absence of cuspidors in the lodge room. As many of the members were heavy users of tobacco, this caused a serious inconvenience. During the discussion of business matters, Brother Jones rose and addressed the chair.
